About

I am a freelance photojournalist, videographer and graphic designer venturing into the wonderful world of web design. I have no ambition to become a web developer (database stuff) but appreciate the importance and challenge developers go through. I am interested in learning as much as I can, or need to, to address issues that come up on the front end of web design. In all, I think the internet holds great potential for good and can be a place where humanity can learn more about itself.
