I need to leave a project in Firebase and I have no option for to leave the project because I don't have the ownership of the project. I am a member in that project and need to leave that project, as its development has been stopped several months before

Is there any option to do that? I also need to delete it from Google Developer Console.

This is not possible right now.

You cannot remove yourself from the Firebase project, because you also cannot remove yourself from the Google Cloud project.

Google was made aware that people need this in 2011 (sic!) but until now did not add this feature. There is a Change.org petition now which will hopefully get enough developers to sign.

So if you really need this: sign the petition, click the star in Google's issue tracker and pray.

2   +1 I signed the petition. I hope Google will take action even if it doesn't reach the number of required signatures. This is absurd. – Gene M Jan 10, 2021 at 18:10 ✏️

It seems that normal member couldn't leave project. Only way is to ask one of the owners to remove you from the project.

Yes, there is no way to do that it seems. I have contacted the owner of the project and asked him to remove me.

Not all owners unfortunately can do it according to their competence in this area))) – fqf Sep 30, 2021 at 0:46

Ask one the project owners to remove you instead.

It will show us like this....

Are you sure that you want to remove yourself from the project? This may prevent you from making further changes to project permissions. Organisation administrators will still have access.

Cancel   Remove

Which makes you believe you are going out of project but next moment it will show you like this...

You do not have sufficient permission

By mistake, I removed owner user (myself) from the only project I have on my Firebase account. Now, I have no access to this project as well as I can't create a new project on the same account for a strange error (as you can see in the screenshot) as I have no project in my account.

I still have access to my project on Google Cloud but it doesn't help to retrieve me as owner to my project.

Let's start with a name for your project ⑦

Enter your project name

(my-awesome-project-id)

⚠ You've reached the project limit for your account. You can add Firebase to an existing project or request an increased limit.
