Agile Development 101 Video [closed]

8

I've been trying to find a good video that I can show at a "Lunch and Learn" on Agile Development / Scrum. Our organization is primarily Waterfall and most people have never even heard of Agile development let alone have any concrete knowledge of the topic. There are plenty of great resources out there that talk about Agile, but they all seem to assume a basic working knowledge of Agile. I can not find one that gives a good, down to earth, introduction to Agile development for those who know nothing about.

Can anyone provide such a link?

Thanks in Advance.

FYI, I created an aggregated answer and marked it community owned. Since the votes won't buy me anything, feel free to use it as a good reference of the many fine answers submitted below. (and edit and update as necessary.) – Justin Standard Dec 13, 2008 at 0:39

The Autumn of Agile video-cast series is exactly what you're looking for.

It's produced by Steve, who blogs at http://unhandled-exceptions.com.

The quality and depth of the presentation is very good. You will be impressed.

I liked this when I saw it:

Introduction to Agile for Traditional Project Managers

From the site:

In this presentation filmed during Agile 2007, Stacia Broderick introduces Agile to traditionally trained project managers by making a comparison between Project Management Institute's (PMI) best practices and their equivalent Agile techniques.

Here's a video called "Scrum et al." which is Ken Schwaber presenting the topic at a Google Tech Talk.

"Google Tech Talks September 5, 2006 Ken Schwaber co-developed the Agile process, Scrum. He is a founder of the Agile Alliance and Scrum .."

There's a series of 2 videos on Agile Development, from the guys of .Net Rocks!. Google for "Venkat Subramaniam on Fundamentals of Agile Design", I think is show no. 73, and see if it fits for your audience. There's also an introductory podcast here: http://channel9.msdn.com/shows/ARCast+with+Ron+Jacobs/ARCastnet-The-Agile-Architect-with-Jeffrey-Palermo/, but is only audio.

Ken Schwaber has a bunch of videos up at http://www.controlchaos.com/. They're somewhat short but I've found watching the videos then discussing the individual topics is a good format for a meeting.

Hamid Shojaee produced a ten minutes video on Scrum (also available in High Definition). It's very rhythmical and amusing. Could be a great start for a discussion for your Lunch'n Learn.

I don't have any links for you, but I do have one piece of advice that applies when you can't find the resource you need: create it yourself.

If you look long and hard and can't find any video that is right for your group, you can always invest some of your time to create that video. Then make sure it is prominently available on the internet and someone else in your shoes will have the video they need.
